Jowl and Greens.

Specialties of the Kentucky Caisine Juicily Discussed.

[From Ben Cassidy's Table Talk.] When the grass begins to show a healthy green on the hill sides—when the buds begin sto swell, the fish to bite, the lambs to frisk. and the birds to pair -in short, when spring, ethereal mildness, no longer lingers in the lap of winter, the appetite of man, like that of the brute, craves a deal of diet. The horse tires of his yellow corn, chopped oats, hay and bran, and his mouth waters for the emerald grass and the tender shoots of herbage that spring up in the fence corners. When turned out, his festive heels cleave the ambientair, and he laughs a veritable horse laughat the prospect of filling up with greens. So it is with man. He gets through the winter admirably on sirloin steaks, poultry, oysters, canned fruit, "and sich," but when the spring comes he feels a gnawing and hankering in his "innards" which neither the grocer nor the butcher can satisfy. His stomach revolts at porter-house; mutton mortally offends him. and he turns up his contemptuous nose at poultry. He loathes hominy and rice, and his immost soul with deep disgust is stirred at the bare thought of dried apples. He reviews the history of Nebuchadnezzar, and the fate of that runinating biped does not strike him as being particularly hard. He feels an almost irresistible inclination to go on all fours and bark the fruit trees as the horses do. Even his matutinal cocktail "goes agin him," and he is generally out of sorts.

In many parts of our beloved country our fellow-men and women annually pass through this uncomfortable phase of existence without knowing what is the matter with them, and suffer gastric agony until the crisp radishes come upon the table. But in Kentucky we know what this mysterious craving of the appetite means, and how to satisfy it. We understand ourselves, and know what's the mat-ter with Hannah. The human system, impoverished in certain elements by the long use of winter grub, needs something to supply the waste. What we need is jowl, and greens! Other less favored communities have bacon and greens, or greens plain, boiled to pulp and erved up with perhaps a slice or two of hardboiled egg to aid the imposition, but in Kentucky alone do we find that grandest combination of culinary science—that dish fit for the gods—jowl and greens. The jaunty dandelion, the 'lamb's quarter,' the broad leaf of the water dock, the pungent wild mustard, or the more civilized spinach and turnip top, furnish the tender, toothsome garniture for the royal jowl, salted to a nicety, smoked to a golden brown and brought upon the table with just a tinge of that creosotic flavor so enjoya-ble in cured meats and Scotch whiskies. Jowl and greens exist in a sporadic form in other States. It may be occasionally encountered in farm-houses throughout Indiana and Illinois, while in the Southern States it is more common. But in Kentucky alone is it epidemic and found in its highest state of development. Here alone is the dish appreciated, and accorded its proper position in the list of good things, combining the attributes of the necessary and the luxury. In season it is given the place of honor on our hotel bills of fare, shaming by the imposing grandeur of its democratic symplicity the frothy frumpery of French de-lusions and snares with which it is associated. The eye of the jaded epicure, passing hurriedly over the pretenders, rests with a sense of satisfied complacency on jowl and greens. An indispensable auxiliary to jowl and greens is corn bread, and here again Kentucky proudly challenges the competition of the world .-None of your vile compounds of alkali and acids, with which the housewives of other States persecute the stomach, and horrify the gastrie juice—nor the sodden mass of dough, molasses and "Injun meal" with which the bigoted Yankee does penance for his sins-but the sweet, palatable pulp, baked to a turn, and melting on the enraptured palate with a richness that lingers like a sweet remembrance of faded joys. The corn bread of Tennessee is good. The corn bread of the West has no distinctive character, being sometimes good and buy something else, or you will be disappointed; sometimes bad. The corn bread of Kentucky rather go where you can get it put up in large is a joy forever. But to return to our cohon. We believe humanity is indebted to Luke Cullus, one of the pioneers, for the grand combination of jowl and greens. Mr. Cullus is a lineal descendant of the great Emperor of the same name who fooled away his time in devising flimsy dishes of peacocks' tongues, while he might have had jowl and greens.

There is one element in the African which redeems him from barbarism-one streak of higher organization which encourages us in the hope of ultimate civilization and enlightenment. He takes kindly to jowl and greens.-He dotes on the fat, persimmon-fed and prehensile-tailed opossum, baked with sweet taters: but his religion is jowl and greens. And in this devotion wealth and refinement strike hands with toiling poverty. Jowl and greens is the one touch of nature which makes us all

If there is any envious reader from the lands to the north of us who thinks we have taken up too much space with this gastronomic rhapsody, we retort that we scorn his suggestions. The man who don't like jowl and greens is a fraud-a fit subject for treason, stratagem and spoils. We shall continue to eat in defiance of his strictures. There is nutriment in jowl and greens. 'It is hygienic, soothin, satisfyin', fillin' and relishin.' Jowl and greens.

E LEGANT HAIR adds a charm to the plant est face; but when faded, features before agreeable lose their comeliness, and the whole expression is that of advancing age. This being t fact, it is not surprising that even injurious articles should have been prepared to supply the millions who wish to avoid premature gray hair. Under these circumstances it will scarcely be wondered at that NATTANS' CRYSTALDIS-COVERY should have met with such extraor-

It is the only preparation furnishing a safe and reliable restorer for the hair; absolutely free from all poisonous and deleterious matter and without sediment, and thousands above thousands have availed themselves of it, not simply because it restores the color of the hair, but because it supplies nourishment. It feeds the roots of the hair, so that where decayed it becomes vigorous and healthy again. From all sections of the country orders and testimonials are received daily, speaking in the highest terms of its qualities as the only preparation that ever gave entire satisfaction. Those who have used CRYSTAL DISCOVERY will not use any thing else; but to those who have not tried this excellent article it is recommended that when they are again in want of something of the kind to give it a trial; you will be more than pleased; you will be delighted with it, and will never again be without it. Don't let your druggist, if he has not got CRYSTAL DISCOVERY persuade you to rather go where you can get it put up in large bottles, containing half as much more as any other in market and, consequently much the cheapest. Price one dollar. For sale by WAR-FIELD & HALL, and druggists generally.

The celebrated stallion COHEE will be let this season. All persons wishing his ser-vices had better apply soon, as he will be limit-ed to a certain number. Description:—Co-hee is a dark, mahogany by about 16 hands high, 12 years old. His pedigree will show that there is not, and never was, in America a higher bred horse. He is uncommonly large for a thorough bred, and very beautiful. For those who understand such matters, we will say: He was by imported Skylark; his dam by importwas by imported Skylark, his dam by imported Lufborough; his grant-dam by oid Sir Archy; his great-grand-dam by Taylor's Topgallant; his great-great-grand-dam was imported Castianera, the dam of old Sir Archy. Proofs of his pedigree are altogether of a class above any possible doubt. J. OWEN KERBY. any possible doubt.
